I’m a rideshare driver and have been asked to complete a VEVO check

Check Types · https://workerchecks.com/docs/understanding-vevo-checks-for-rideshare/

If you drive or deliver for Uber, DiDi, Ola, DoorDash, or any other rideshare or delivery platform in Australia, you may need a VEVO right-to-work check and/or a national police check. This guide explains what each check covers, who needs it, and how to complete it.

Check 1

VEVO right to work check

A VEVO (Visa Entitlement Verification Online) check confirms your legal right to work in Australia directly against the Department of Home Affairs database. Rideshare and delivery platforms require this if you hold any temporary or permanent visa — including student, 482, working holiday, and permanent residency visas.

Australian and New Zealand citizens do not need a VEVO check.

- Confirms visa type, expiry date, and work-rights conditions
- Checks for any work hour limits (e.g. student visa caps)
- Result delivered to your Worker Checks portal within 60 minutes
- Secure delivery — available to download or e-share

National police check (NCCHC)

All driver-partners must hold a valid Nationally Coordinated Criminal History Check (NCCHC). This verifies your criminal history across all Australian states and territories.

- ACIC-accredited — officially authorised provider
- 80% of results returned within 1–3 minutes
- Accepted by Uber, DiDi, Ola, and all major delivery platforms

- 100% online — no paperwork or post office visit required
- Secure digital certificate via your Worker Checks portal

Employment check $52.00 ✓ 80% in 1–3 min

Which check type? Select employment check for rideshare and delivery work — you are being paid as an independent contractor. The volunteer rate does not apply to paid driving work.

Turnaround: typically 5–15 business days depending on country
