Check Types · https://workerchecks.com/es/docs/como-comprobar-los-antecedentes-de-una-persona-en-australia/

Background checks are an essential part of employment, volunteer, and contractor screening in Australia. They help organisations verify criminal history, work rights, and professional qualifications — ensuring safe and compliant hiring decisions. With Worker Checks, you can complete all major Australian background checks 100% online with ACIC-accredited accuracy.

1. Nationally Coordinated Criminal History Check (NCCHC)

The Nationally Coordinated Criminal History Check — also called a National Police Check — is the most common background check in Australia. It searches the national criminal history database across all states and territories and returns a certificate listing any disclosable court outcomes.

Important: A police check can only be conducted with the informed consent of the individual it's for. You cannot run a check on someone else without their knowledge and permission.

3. Right to Work — VEVO Check

Employers are legally required to verify that all staff have the right to work in Australia. This is done through the Visa Entitlement Verification Online (VEVO) system, managed by the Department of Home Affairs.

- Visa type and expiry date
- Work restrictions (if any)
- Employer or occupation limits
- Results within 60 minutes — checked against Home Affairs records

Price: $10.00 per check — results within 60 minutes.

Note: A one-time check at hire is not sufficient under the Migration Amendment (Strengthening Employer Compliance) Act 2024. Ongoing VEVO monitoring is recommended for all visa-holder employees.

4. AusCheck Background Checks — Government Only

The Australian Government's AusCheck program conducts background checks for security-sensitive industries such as aviation, maritime, and critical infrastructure.

You cannot apply directly to AusCheck. Applications must be made through an authorised issuing body (such as an airport or port authority).

An AusCheck check may include a national security assessment (via ASIO), VEVO work-rights verification, and a criminal intelligence assessment for Aviation or Maritime Security Identification Cards (ASIC/MSIC).

Worker Checks does not provide AusCheck clearances directly but offers the ACIC-accredited criminal history check and VEVO components used by authorised issuing bodies.
